To Whom It May Concern:

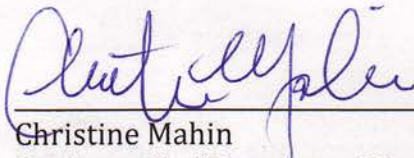

I am a producer for the A&E documentary series, "Paranormal State." While preparing to film the thirty-fifth episode (part of our second season), it became evident that we would need someone to speak about the historical, social and even psychological context of Oujia or Talking Boards.

Robert Murch was the obvious choice to come on the show and speak on this topic. Our lead investigator and star of "Paranormal State," Ryan Buell, was very interested in bringing Robert on, and reached out to him immediately. Robert very graciously agreed to help us, and upon our shoot date, drove down from Boston, Mass. to our location in the Adirondacks.

Robert was not only personable, pleasant and cooperative; he was immensely informative and knowledgeable on the topic of Talking Boards. He was charismatic and clear on camera, and his input was invaluable to the investigation, especially in contextualizing Talking Boards, which was a huge element in our investigation. The crew, producers and, most importantly, the paranormal investigators were very favorably impressed with Robert.

"Paranormal State" would be thrilled to work with Robert Murch again, and we would and shall recommend him to anyone who is looking for an expert on Spirit Boards.

Sincerely,

Christine Mahin
Producer for "Paranormal State"
